I want a name for my Gulf Beach Inn Pavilion, which, fitted up with every convenience as an attractive holiday resort, will be formally opened SUNDAY, MAY 8. See later announcement. Send your suggestions plainly written on one side of paper, with your name attached in sealed envelope, addressed "Capt. Bennie Edmundson, Name Contest, South Palatka street, City." "BUFFALO BILL" AND THE VANISHING WEST

Baltimore Sun.

"Buffalo Bill" is to retire to private life. He says so himself and even now is beginning his first "farewell tour." No man is immortal, and even Chauncey Depew must get old some time. The dashing Buffalo Bill is not exempt. He is getting old, he is getting rich, and he is getting tired of performing in the spotlight. For nearly thirty years he has been marching around the world with his cowboys, his Indians and his ponies. He is old enough to have been a scout in the civil war, he fought Indians for twenty years after that, and he still looks younger than many a man who never fought anybody at all. To the boys of this generation Buffalo Bill is the embodiment of the west of their dreams. He brings to them real Indians, real cowboys, wonderful beings in broad sombreros, who can ride like centaurs and shoot like fiends. He pictures for them in vivid fashion the time when the west was the "frontier," when Indians roamed the plains and the settler had to fight his way across half a continent. All that has vanished. You can travel now from Wichita to Price without being scalped. You can cross the plains in a Pullman car at sixty miles an hour. The Indian today is a rather tame and uninteresting individual, who likes to sit around on the sunny side of the house, wrap his blanket around him and smoke in peace. Geomans and Sitting Bull are gone; the ferocious old chiefs have passed away. Few remain of the reckless cowboys who carried their lives in their hands and cubs in their pockets. The danger and the romance is being civilized out of the west.

Not long ago an eminent foreign diplomat who made a tour of America exclaimed: "I have made a great discovery—there is no wild west!" It is true. The west that was "wild and woolly" has vanished. But the time when it was the "frontier" will remain one of the most interesting and romantic periods of our history. It will not be many years before we will see the passing of the last of the pioneers.
